

Also you should to try speak with people in Germany.

Most importantly, don't give up! I know you can do this! I hope that I was able to help you and that things will get better. I think you ^{will} fast learn German.

All the best,

will

Dear Kristina,

Good job! You ~~were~~ gave good advice, followed the text type and reset the new language we learned

Be careful:

- translation / transcribing
translate to (e.g. English)
- need to do eg. she needs to know

Situation 3:

Dear Marten,

Thank you for your message, i was really happy to hear from you. I can understand your issue, but i'm glad that ~~besides~~ besides that you are doing okay!

Wanting to go vegan is a big decision, because you will change up your eating habits completely. And it must be even more challenging if your family has a bad picture of it and of the effect that it could have on your body.

First of all i would like to mention that you are making a very thought full decision and that wanting to support animals and their rights is important, especially people our age should invest themselves more in that type of problems because we are the new generation (i feel) like you should start by educating your parents about veganism in a careful way, show them studies and ~~you~~ good looking food you can cook. So that they might lose their fear of veganism being unhealthy.

You could also start buying more vegan things, because you mentioned that they think it's way too expensive. So by that you can bring them the food and maybe show them that it is not ~~that~~ as expensive as they think and that it pays off.

I suggest you to ~~then~~ try talking to your family and maybe decide on cooking ~~vegan~~ on or any day you guys agree on, so they can get used to it. And maybe work up to cooking vegan ~~at all~~ ^{at all} day once a week. ^{edwards}

one a week OR one day a week

Most importantly i want you to stay focus at your goal, and to not let anybody bring you down. If you really want to do this then stick by it and let me know if you need anything, i support you!

All the best,
Melba

Dear Melia,

You wrote an excellent letter
using a lot of ~~great~~ ^{very nice} phrases

and giving very good advice

Be careful about:

- decide & decision

- suggest someone ~~do~~ ^{to do} something

(- focus on smth.)
