Read the story of Greyfriars Bobby and correct the mistakes.

Greyfriars Bobby is the most famous dog who ever lived in ~~America~~ ^{Scotland}. He was so famous that a statue was put up to him in ~~New York~~ ^{Edinburgh}. We know that Bobby belonged to an Edinburgh ~~teacher~~ ^{police man} named John Gray. He was a Skye Terrier and his job was to help catch thieves. Bobby was very ~~bad~~ ^{good} at that.

But one bitterly cold ~~summer~~ ^{winter} day John Gray fell ill with a terrible fever. Bobby snuggled close to him to keep him warm. He stayed beside his master even when John Gray died.

He followed the funeral procession to Greyfriars churchyard.

After the funeral Bobby stayed at his master's ~~house~~ ^{grave}. He stood there and howled. He was very ~~happy~~ ^{sad}. The days came and went, and still Bobby did not leave his master's ~~house~~ ^{grave}.

Dogs were not allowed in the churchyard, but James Brown, the grave-digger felt sorry for Bobby and let him stay. On cold nights he even invited him into his house and gave him some food.

When spring came, Bobby chased away all the ~~birds~~ ^{cats} in the churchyard. Mr. Brown was pleased, he didn't like the ~~birds~~ ^{cats} in the churchyard.

Bobby soon made lots of friends. Many people brought him ~~books~~ ^{food} and ~~pencils~~ ^{water}. The waiters of the restaurants nearby gave him leftovers to eat. Lonely old ladies sang to him when they came to the graveyard.

Bobby became very famous. The story of the happy and faithful dog was reported in all the newspapers. Soon the churchyard was crowded with sightseers, painters and photographers. Now there is even a bronze statue of Bobby outside Greyfriars churchyard and ~~an~~ ^{Walt Disney wrote a book} Walt Disney made a song about him. ^{an American lady}

Bobby spent fourteen years close to his master's grave. When he died, he was buried in a flowerpot in front of Greyfriars church. A hundred years later, a stone was put up to mark the spot. You can go to Greyfriars churchyard and see John Gray's and Bobby's graves.
