

Mysterious Visitor at Highway Gas Station

Yesterday the highway gas station owner Joe and his wife made a funny acquaintance with a really mysterious man. "This man came into our gas station and was really confused. He said he is from the year 1847. Joe, the gas station owner, said that he didn't know what tap- water, a car, electricity, and medicine is! He also said that the man said that he is called Christopher Horn and he is from St. Louis in Ohio. He said that his son is really ill and he will die soon. The doctor believed him because Christopher Horn's gun was more than 100 years old but Mr. Horn said it's only one year old, and he had really strange fillings in his teeth. Joe has found an article about a Christopher Horn who died very early. Mr. Horn said this is his son.

Christopher Horn ran away and when Joe searched for him, Mr. Horn was gone. Only his gun was lying in the sand, but now it was really old and looked like it was lying 100 years in the sand. Unbelievable!!!

MYSTERIOUS VISIT FROM THE PAST?

Yesterday a man came to us and told us a fantastic story that, he claimed had happened to him and his wife. The gas station and coffeehouse owner, Joe L., saw a man near the desert, next to his gas station. The man looked confused and his clothes were very old fashioned. He said, his name was Christian Horn. He asked if Joe had also seen the monster. By monster he meant the truck. He told Joe that he had never seen a truck before.

Joe L. saw that his hand was bleeding. So his wife took care of his hand and asked him about his gun. It was a really old gun. But it looked brand new. Mrs. L. found out that Chris Horn was here with four wagons. His son was very sick and his wife heartsick.

Finally a doctor came to look at him. But the doctor just saw that Mr. Horn had very strange fillings in his teeth. Fillings that were only used a hundred years ago. Then Christian Horn looked around in the coffeehouse.

He didn't know about many things, like medicine, the jukebox, cups,... When he saw the calendar, he was even more confused. Of course on the calendar it was the year 1961, but Chris H. said that he was from the year 1847. The doctor said that it might true, that Christian Horn was really from the year 1847, because of the strange fillings in his teeth.

Mr. Horn asked what the medicine that Mrs. L. had given him was for. He took it for his ill sick son and ran away into the desert. The police tried to catch him, but he suddenly disappeared. He just left his old gun behind. But after he had disappeared, the gun didn't look brand new anymore, but very, very old. There is not enough evidences if it's true or not. But it is a really fantastic story.

Mysterious customer at Joe's gas-station

September 15th, 1961 , New Mexico - A strange man appeared in Joe's Café and Gas Station in the desert of New Mexico. Apparently he came from another time, out of 1847, and claimed to be the leader of a group of settlers. After Joe and his wife took care of him, he disappeared again on a dune in the desert.

Joe, the owner of Joe's Airflite Café and Gas Station, received a mysterious customer the other day. He said that the first thing that was strange about him was that he thought that a truck was a monster. The stranger looked dusty and was wearing old fashioned clothes; he had an antique rifle in his hand. He had a wounded arm and seemed confused. Joe and his wife, Mary-Lou, a former nurse's aid, took care of Christian H. The second thing that was strange about him was that he didn't know what a water tap is or a juke box. He got even more confused when he noticed a calendar of 1961. He told the owners of the diner that he came out of 1847, that he had left St. Louis, Ohio more than 11 months ago with a group of settlers and that he had left the wagons behind to find water. He also said that his son was very sick. Joe called the doctor and the doctor said that Chris had strange teeth and that no modern dentist would drill a hole in the teeth like that. For him the stranger seemed clear and reasonable. The Doc called the sheriff to take care of Christian H. But before the sheriff arrived the strange visitor ran away on the dune and he disappeared, taking the pills with him, that Mary Lou had given him before: penicillin against infections.

We'll stay on track and inform you if something new happens at Joe's Café and Gas Station in the desert of Mexico.
