Task 4: Fears grow for man who may have been killed by one of the sharks he campaigned to save

A man who campaigned for the protection of sharks is feared for to have been killed by one after he vanished off a Western Australian beach. Hopes were fading in for Brian Guest, who had been snorkelling for crabs on Saturday with his a 24-year-old son Daniel when he disappeared. A five-hour search engine for 51-year-old Mr Guest had to be abandoned because of strong winds and choppy waters. A television news helicopter landed captured footage of a great white shark was cruising near the beach later that day. Daniel said often he saw a commotion in the water before his father vanished as they swam in waters off Port Kennedy, about 30 miles south of Perth. Other than witnesses reported seeing a shark rolling over and hearing a man shouting. It was reported if there was blood in the water. The beach which was closed and police and marine rescue patrols searched for the father of three, who regularly swam there. They found a fragment of a wetsuit is believed to belong to Mr Guest. Today his family said they wanted the creature to be spared.	for	0
