Have you ever...?

Explain to the students that they are going to play a card game, but before they play, they have to prepare some questions.

Divide the class groups of four. Then divide the students into pairs. Give each pair in the group one set of verb cards. Go through the past participles of the verbs and write some example questions on the board.

Examples:

make – made

write - written

Have you ever made a fire?

Have you ever written a love letter?

Have the pairs write a question for each verb. Tell the students the questions should not be too simple or easy to answer. Go around and help the students if necessary.

When all the groups have finished, explain how to play the game.

Each team puts their cut-up cards face down in a pile in front of the other team. Teams take it in turns to play.

Team A start and pick up one of team B's verb cards from the top of the pile. Team B then asks one of the players on team A the corresponding "Have you ever ...?" question from their prepared list of questions.

The chosen player from the team A must answer, "Yes, I have," regardless of whether it's true or not. Team B then asks three follow-up questions. After the three questions have been asked, Team B decides if the player's answer is true or false.

The player then reveals the truth. If Team B is correct, they win a point. The team with the most points at the end of the game wins.

The teacher can give an example from the written questions on the board.

Example:

Teacher: Have you ever made a fire?

Student: Yes, I have.

Teacher: Where did you make a fire?

Student: At a campsite.

Teacher: Why did you make a fire?

Student: Because I was cold.

Teacher: How did you make a fire?

Student: With some wood and a lighter.

Teacher: Hmmm. I think that's true.

Student: No, it's false. No points for you teacher.
